Something new has been added, but nothing old, like the dangerously overhanging dead limbs and underbrush, has been removed from Sedalia's "jungle." Appearing among the various political signs on this dead tree this week was the "No Hunting" sign. It was not determined if the sign referred to the politicians or prospective hunters. The jungle is the overgrown former mansion property on the southwest corner of the intersection at Broadway and Massachusetts. (Democrat-Capital photo).

LBJ's Housing Program Is Given Solid Victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has given President years. Johnson a solid legislative victory by passing, relatively unscathed, a $5.4-billion, threeyear housing bill.

It includes his new program of interest subsidies to help an estimated 500,000 low-income families buy homes. Proponents especially urged adoption of this measure on the theory it would help stabilize restless communities by promoting a sense of ownership and good upkeep of

Nearly all efforts to cut spending authorizations in the bill were turned back during three days of debate in which 56 amendments were considered.

One opponent, Rep. Charles R. Jonas, R-N.C., warned colleagues that long-range commitments in the measure created a potential $50 billion liability for the government over the next 40

Only one major reduction was voted. By 217 to 183 the House reduced the money authorization $100 million by knocking out two controversial programs.

One would have provided interim services, such as street repair, temporary playgrounds and improved trash collection in neighborhoods scheduled for major rehabilitation. The other would have provided public housing projects tenants with counseling in household and child care, and health and jobs.

After passing the bill, 295 to 114, the House moved quickly to send it to conference with the Senate. Traditionally more hospitable to housing programs than the House, that chamber already has passed a substantially similar bill saying that after the conference we will have legislation providing the most comprehensive and specific program ever adopted by the Congress to improve the basic living conditions in this

The interest subsidy program is aimed especially at helping families in the $3,000-$7,000 income bracket buy houses with mortgages up to $15,000 in most areas, $17,500 in high-cost areas.

The government would help meet payments if they amounted to more than 20 per cent of family income. This help would consist of absorbing some of the interest cost, so that in extreme cases, the family would pay only 1 per cent.

The House voted to limit the program to families with income not more than 30 per cent above the level, varying in each Housing Secretary Robert C. community, that sets a ceiling for occupancy of public housing.

Plan For Building Available

William R. Hall, director of Sedalia's Industrial Development Department, said Thursday that plans and specifications for bidding on the Town and Country Shoe Co.'s proposed manufacturing plant are presently available at his office at the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce.

Hall said the plans "could not be taken from the office, but that they are open for inspection," by any prospective contractors

Earlier this year, Sedalia voters approved a general obligation industrial bond issue for the firm's expansion

The new plant will be located on Highway 50, west of Biederman's.

According to Hall, sealed bids must be received in the Office of the Sedalia city clerk prior to July 29 for consideration. The July deadline applies to the structural, architectural and foundation contracts.

and process piping contract bids must be received on or before

The Austin Company of Chicago is the construction manager for the Town and Country project. Hall said there has been some confusion on this point since several persons thought the Chicago was the prime contractor.

Once completed, the new manufacturing plant will reportedly employ about 800 people. Present production facilities will be converted to storage and warehouse uses.

Endorsement For Nuclear Treaty Move

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Defense Department endorsed the nuclear nonproliferation treaty today as "an important step forward toward new forms of security" and said it gives cautious encouragement to prospects for further U.S.-Soviet disarmament deals.

Schwarzer, in his full-time capacity as director for the commission, will maintain his office in the Johnson County Courthouse. His primary job will be to assist small governmental units in obtaining aid to obtain approved projects for their communities.

The new director has proved his abilities to coordinate and promote community and area development through his efforts in obtaining recent improvements in Higginsville. He was district manager for the Phillips Petroleum Co. in the Higginsville area.

After the executive meeting during which Schwarzer was employed, the full commission met and received the first in a three-phase report on the Comprehensive Water-Sewer Plan for the Pettis, Johnson and Lafavette County area, submitted by General Planning and Resources Consultants, planning engineers for the Show-Me Commission. The report does not include the cities of Warrensburg and Sedalia.

The preparation of the three reports was financed 100 per cent by a grant from the Farmers Home Administration, U.S. Department of Agriculture, at no cost to the taxpayers in the three counties.

The report provides background information on various physical, social and economic characteristics of the area plus an analysis of existing water and sewer system in the region. It lays the background for the following two phases in the report, which will be followed by a final report.

`Follow-the-Book' Rule Causing Traffic Delays

week ago, members of an air traffic controllers group announced they would begin to here. We have had some delays "follow the book"—procedures that could delay planes on the ground and in the air at major airports across the country.

Today, however, it was not clear just what effect, if any, the plan for stringent enforcement of Federal Aviation Administration rules for controlling airport arrivals and departures was having.

Walter Beuchler, air traffic branch chief of the FAA's New York region, said there were delays of from 15 to 30 minutes on the ground and of up to 11/2 hours in the air. He said the controllers' campaign was causing a "national problem.

A spokesman for the controllers also said the campaign was causing delays but FAA officials elsewhere in the country said that although there were delays, they were not due to any slow-

Members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, which claims to represent 90 per cent of the 10,000 controllers in the United States. adopted a resolution at their convention July 5 to strictly enforce the FAA rules about separation time between planes for safety reasons. The controllers said heavy traffic had led to the rules being stretched in time is determined by a formula involving a number of factors. Jack Maher, coordinator for PATCO, said Wednesday there were delays of up to two hours at Kennedy Airport. He said planes scheduled to land at Kennedy were diverted to other airports for refueling because of the traffic backup.

Maher added that the campaign would have a greater effect as more controllers were informed of it.

But officials at Los Angeles and at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport said any delays at these airports were caused by heavy traffic and not by any intentional slowdown.

TV Series A Belated Endeavor

NEW YORK (AP) - Negro soldiers fought and died in every war the United States has waged. You just don't hear much about it.

In the second broadcast of its "Of Black America" series, tersely narrated by Bill Cosby. CBS attempted Tuesday night to set the record straight with "The Black Soldier.

The half-hour show was a valiant, though belated, effort to overcome the neglect of generations of historians.

How many, for instance, knew that the first to die in the Boston Massacre in 1770 was an escaped slave named Crispus Attucks? Or that nearly 17 per cent of the Colonial army was Negro?

Or that Negro sailors were aboard the ironclad Monitor when she fought the Merrimac? That 38,000 Negro soldiers died in the Civil War or that 14 Negro cavalrymen won the Medal of Honor fighting Indians on the Western frontier? Through a series of paintings, drawings, photographs and newsreel films, the Negro soldier's place in history was shown. As in the first broadcast, the show was not interrupted by commercials. In the nation's earlier wars, Negroes had to fight prejudice just to get into the military service, Cosby said. Once in, they acquitted themselves well. The course was not always smooth. President Theodore Roosevelt court-martialed three companies of the all-Negro 25th Infantry when there was violence in Brownsville, Tex. Segregation, Cosby said, intensified racial frictions in the military.

Later, in Houston, Tex., Negro soldiers of the 24th Regiment killed 17 whites. Thirteen Negroes were hanged and 41 sentenced to life imprisonment.

In World War II reports of troops' "melting away" from the front lines in 1945 marred the otherwise good battle record of the all-Negro 92nd Infantry Division, one of 4,000 all-Negro units in the Army.

All-in-all, the program was interesting and informative. Indeed, it was a contribution to understanding. Still, there is that nagging feeling that it could have-should have -gone further. It is regretted that CBS limited the scope of "The Black Soldier" to a mere recounting of accomplishments, as admirable as the intent may be. Worthy of additional exploration is the irony of such an undemocratic institution as the military service now being one of the nation's most democratic in its attitude toward, and its treatment of, Negroes.

Outline The Road To Success

By BOB THOMAS

AP Movie-TelevisionWriter HOLLYWOOD (AP) - What makes one community theater thrive while others fail? The ingredients for success are being demonstrated in Hollywood these weeks as the American Conservatory Theater offers two plays at the Huntington Hartford Theater.

The San Francisco-based repertory company is making its first full-scale invasion of Southern California and audiences have been cheering the offerings of Moliere's "Tartuffe" and Dylan Thomas' "Under Milk-

The reception echoes the sentiments of critics. The conveniently initialed A.C.T. has been called "The most prolific and pertory company in the U.S." by Newsweek. Walter Kerr of The New York Times has commented, "It's is just possible that the A.C.T. may revolutionize American theater practice.' Cecil Smith of the Los Angeles Times called the original premiere of the company's "Tartuffe" "the most exciting evening I ever spent in the theater."

Why is the A.C.T. so good? The question was put to redbearded Willima Bushnell, the general manager.

"One reason is the talent of Bill Ball," he replied, referring to the director whose unorthodox night stands as distant as Pullstaging has brought new vitality to standard plays. "A second factor is the quality of the acting company; actors want to work with Bill. Now that we're a going concern, the concept of training new performers is paying dividends in ensemble play-

"Another factor in our favor is the relative youth of the company. The average performer is around 28 or 29 and the staff members are mostly about 32. So the usual generation gap between those who run things and those who do things is avoided.'

The A.C.T. had its beginnings in Pittsburgh in 1965. "But the theater and the community probably the most exciting re- didn't mesh," said Bushnell, and the company noved on to the University of Michigan, Westport, Conn., and Stanford University before finding a home in San Francisco in 1967.

"It was a happy coincidence: San Francisco happened to be without a theater and we were without a city," said Bushnell.

The company took over the Geary Theater (1,450 seats) and the Marines Memorial (640) and began a dizzying schedule of opening new plays. This year the A.C.T. expects to play before upwards of 450,000, sending touring companies on 70 oneman, Wash. An important adjunct is the conservatory, which this summr is running an academy for 225 students.

Year-around, the conservatory offers training to actors in everything from juggling to African dancing. A key part of the training is the Alexander Method, which Bushnell described as a way to harness nervous tension for use in a performance.

Plays Switcheroo And Almost Loses

Dear Ann Landers: I've read some letters in your column from women who considered becoming involved in that suburban swinger's game called "Switcheroo." I hope you will print a letter from a sad and sorry suburbanite who played the game and very nearly lost her home, her sanity and AND BACK everything in life that matters.

My husband and I were fascinated with the stories we had heard about our upper middle class neighbors who got together Saturday nights and changed partners. At first it seemed so bizarre we couldn't imagine ourselves becoming involved in such lunacy. But when our new next-door neighbors suggested we go along - just to "observe". we agreed.

In that highly charged atmosphere, with just enough liquor to warp the judgment and dissolve the inhibitions, the inevitable happened. The couple we switched with were the next-door neighbors.

The rationale was as follows and I admit I bought it hook. line and sinker. There's no reason why mature, wellbalanced adults can't enjoy the physical aspects of sex without making an emotional investment. My husband and I congratulated ourselves on our mature approach. We even persuaded ourselves that variety can revitalize a marriage that had grown dull and unexciting.

After a few months, tensions mounted. Our children grew suspicious. My husband and I began to argue. One day he'd say. "I want a divorce. I'm in love with the lady next door.' the next day he'd say. "She's a slob. I wish I'd never seen her.'

My neighbor-lover began to get on my nerves. He made a complete pest of himself and I was bored with his senseless chatter. Finally, nobody was talking to anybody.

My husband and I decided the horrible involvement was ruining our lives. We agreed that we had to terminate our relationship with the neighbors. but it would be impossible so long as we lived next door. So we agreed to move, not only to another neighborhood. but to another state.

This meant taking a job at a smaller salary, selling our home at a loss and pulling our children out of schools where they were doing well. Our foolishness had cost more than we had planned to pay. Six months have passed and we are gradually returning to a

One of the advertisements, sponsored by Urban America, Inc., tells how Lockheed Aircraft included persons with police records in its hiring and training program and helped solve its own labor problems.

Urban America, Inc., a nonprofit organization dedicated to improving the social and physical environment in the nation's cities, also tells how IBM is bringing employment to the slums by converting an old warehouse in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant district into a computer cable factory.

NEW YORK (AP) — "If individuals can help by developing recreational activities and unteering to teach new skills. Robert P. Keim, president of the Advertising Council, said the four-pronged attack on the American domestic crisis is the most massive project ever mounted by his organization in its 26-year history.

The council is a nonprofit organization which conducts national advertising campaigns for the public good. Its operating budget of about $700,000 a year comes from funds solicited from companies in the advertising-communications industry. Advertising agencies contribute all creative services in preparing campaigns, and all advertising space in publications and radio and television time is contributed by media owners.

In one of the television spots produced for the current drive, the camera scans the room of a slum dwelling while a child's voice is heard saying, kitty, kitty. Here kitty, kitty." Suddenly the camera zooms in on a large rat. What if your child mistook a rat for a kitten?" asks the commentator, Melvin Douglas.

Some of the posters put out for one of the campaigns read: "Most kids live in cities. So do most rats;" "What happens to our cities happens to our suburbs," and "Ancient Rome had better sanitary facilities than parts of our cities do now.'

Peaceful Parade Expected

BELFAST. Northern Ireland (AP)—A million Northern Irishmen will assert their independence from Ireland's republic in the annual Orange Day parades Friday. The chances are that this time, at least, there'll be no bloodied noses Enlightened leadership in the past five years has driven extremists from the forefront of the battle on both sides of the border. The republic's Premier Jack Lynch and Northern Ireland's Prime Minister Terence O'Neill, both too young to have been in their country's civil war, have met to shake hands.

Now things which could have provoked violence a few years back are accepted with hardly a murmur. If it isn't exactly togetherness between the Roman Catholic South and the mainly Protestant North, there's a new spirit of coexistence abroad There's even some discreet cooperation at official levels.

Protestant Ulster officially is still adamant that this part of partitioned Ireland shall acknowledge Queen Elizabeth II and fly the Union Jack. Members of the dominant Unionist party, which has ruled since 1921, still look on Northern Roman Catholics-one-third of Ulster's population-as open or secret sympathizers with the Irish Republic

For nearly half a century Belfast has been the most turbulent corner of the British Isles. Its politics have been bedeviled by religion. Men have been stoned. even killed, for their opinions.

Convinced that most people in Northern Ireland dislike extremism and want a new approach to cross-border and religious problems, O'Neill took a daring step. He staged discreet meetings first with Premier Sean Lemass, then his successor, Jack Lynch, of the Irish Republic. Such a move was considered so perilous that the first meeting was not disclosed until it had taken place.

Gilbert "Gib" White, State Secretary, Missouri Lions District 26, was the principal speaker. White, who participated in the International Convention of Lions in Dallas recently as a representative of International, spoke on 'rumors' regarding the International Association and the selling of the Lions Headquarters Building in Chicago.

White said, "the "First," rumor that the sale of the International Headquarters was being made because of financial troubles of the Association is strictly untrue. International is financialy sound and has an excellent balance on hand at the close of the fiscal year which will be shown in the annual The selling of the building is a result of a far better price than was anticipated and as the International Officers now feel that a new Headquarters building will be constructed near the International Airport in Chicago and will be a 'show place' of which all Lions will be proud. He said that during the past vear over 1.100 new clubs were organized and the membership over the world was increased by more than 25,000. "Lions today are located in 127 countries and the combined membership is more than the combined membership of both Rotary and Kiwanis. We are hoping for one-million membership this year.' White also reviewed the Missouri Lions Tissue Bank in conjunction with the University of Missouri Medical Center. He reported the Missouri Lions will provide $250,000, the State will make a grant of a like amount and with federal funds, the bank will be the finest in the world. The Lions within the next few weeks will begin setting aside funds to pay the pledged amount. President Taylor introduced the speaker and then proceeded to award attendance pins and tabs. Immediate Threat Seems

To Be Opponent's Delay

By JOHN CHADWICK

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - The most immediate threat to Senate confirmation of President Johnson's Supreme Court nominations appears to be delay. with opponents possessing an arsenal of tactics

The Senate Judiciary Committee faced the first of these tactics as hearings opened today on the nomination of Abe Fortas to succeed Earl Warren as chief justice of the United States. Before it could delve into Fortas' qualifications, however, it was confronted with the question of whether a vacancy actually exists on the court. The point was raised by opponents after Johnson accepted Warren's retirement effective with approval of a "qualified succes-

Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark was called to testify on the question, possibly delaying consideration of Fortas' background until Friday when the committee had hoped to take up the nomination of Homer Thornberry.

Johnson named old friend Thornberry a judge on the Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, to fill the vacancy that would be created by the elevation of Fortas, a Supreme Court justice since 1965.

The official telegram of the death was received by the family from General Kenneth G. Wickham, Adjutant General. Lt. John Woorel, Casualty Branch, Fort Leonard Wood, has been assigned to Mrs. Tullis for 30 days to assist her. A military escort will accompany the body to Windsor and will officiate at the services.

Surviving besides the wife and parents are one sister, Mrs. Ray Fritz, Glendale, Ariz.; two grandmothers, Mrs. James Smith, Kansas City, and Mrs. Cleve Tullis, Brownington. Also a niece, Kelly Fritz and a nephew, Ray Fritz, Jr.

Mrs. Tullis has set up a memorial fund in her husband's honor for the National Kidney Foundation. A sister of Mrs. Tullis, Mrs. Barbara Graham, Los Angeles, received a kidney transplant in May in which another sister, Mrs. Richard Clinkenbeard, Cupertino, Calif. was the donor. Sgt. Tullis was very interested in the transplant and the work of the foundation.

Special Ships to Search Sea

Ocean depths unexplored since the beginning of time will soon come within man's reach if plans for new oceanographic research vessels materialize. Here are artist's sketches of three proposed ships designed to probe the ocean's floor. The all-aluminum Alcoa Seaprobe, left, is reportedly the most advanced craft of its type ever to come off the drawing board. The 244-foot, 2,000-ton vessel will possess the capacity to remain almost stationary above a target on the bottom of the sea and then to lower a string of pipe which will support and power drilling equipment or search and recovery gear. Objects 6,000 feet down and weighing as much as 200 tons are said to be within the recovery capabilities of the unique ship. At top right, an Autec research submarine is seen at work. Tools would be selected from an external compartment. In an emergency, the three-man crew could separate the front section of the craft and float to the surface. Two of these subs are nearing completion for delivery to the Navy. Another new Navy oceanographic research ship, bottom right, is the T-AGOR-16, using a catamaran hull designed to provide a stable working platform with large areas for scientific use. The space devoted to laboratories and scientific stores will be more than twice that of previous research ships.

The Miracle Hunters

To the Young: Save Gripes And Help Build the Future

By BRUCE BIOSSAT NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

The student and other young folk are laying it on the adults as never before. But when one of their few heroes, Robert F. Kennedy, was alive he used to give it right back to the young ones.

Late one afternoon on the campus of Valparaiso University in northern Indiana, the senator spoke with some heat to a young questioner who was complaining about the "establishment's" failure to solve quickly some of the nation's critical problems.

Said Kennedy:

"You and many young people like you are always asking why government doesn't do more about these problems. They should do more than they are doing, I agree.

"But I'd like to know why you don't do something about them. The government, for one thing, is you and me. And together we can help to change it. But a lot of things can be done without calling on the government at all. "For instance, how much time do any of you spend in the ghettos or in poverty-ridden eastern Kentucky or on Indian reservations in your free time in summer? Why don't YOU do something about these problems instead of blaming all of our troubles on government?" That exchange produced warm applause from a packed student auditorium. And it touched a nerve that many young people do not recognize as vulnerable. This is the day when carrying placards, occupying buildings, marching, obstructing and disrupting a variety of daily routines, have been confused with "activism." They are, in fact, merely a prelude to action.

The real question is not "When did you march?" but "What

The young idealists who have pitched in to try and nominate Sen. Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota for the presidency can give a good answer to that question-whether their man wins

So can any students or others who have, in fact, gone to the ghettos to teach remedial courses to disadvantaged children, help with health care, or whatever. So can those who worked in the Peace Corps.

But for the all too numerous young ones who think that a placard is a magic wand which should produce instant peace and instant good society, the late Bob Kennedy's questions

Their assaults on the awesomely impersonal nature of modern government and business are at once hypocritical

The large school lecture class, the huge corporation and big government have now been with us for decades. But within the inevitably impersonal framework of 20th-century industrial society, it has always been and it is now possible to live a highly individual, very personal life which has a real impact upon society without either shunning it, scorning it or trying to wreck it. Indeed, there is impressive evidence that many young ones who rail against the impersonality of modern life are hiding behind it. How easy, for example, for a young American student radical to blame something called "international capitalism" for the near-starvation of 300,000 Brazilians, instead of crossing town to Harlem to help 25 or 30 deprived Negro youngsters learn to read.

Modern society is made less impersonal only when individuals contrive constructively to have a highly personal effect upon it. Our massive "establishment" is not going to be brought down or made better by those who either cop out or doubled. South's failure to use Blackwood should have told East that South was void of some suit and common sense should have told him that the void would be hearts. North had bid two hearts and East had five of them.

The young who choose these paths are simply underscoring society's impersonality and leaving to others, for good or evil, the task of making it "personal" in some degree or other.

South ruffed the heart lead, cashed the black aces, led his nine of spades to dummy's 10 and thought things over. Should he take a club finesse? Without the double, he might well have done so.

Based on the double, South assumed that he would find East with the ace of diamonds. In that case, if East also held the queen, it would be better technique to try to ruff out the clubs. He led a club to his king and ruffed a club in dummy. Then he led a diamond from dummy. East played low and South finessed his jack. Since clubs had broken 4-2, he needed to find both the ace and queen of diamonds in the East hand.

He ruffed another club to establish his jack and led dummy's last diamond. East took his ace and South took the rest of the tricks, game, slam, rubber and everything else that wasn't nailed down.

Masaryk, Slansky Slayings Strain Czech-Soviet Ties

By LEON DENNEN NEA Foreign News Analyst

NEW YORK (NEA) Murder will out, even in the secret Communist

A fascinating side issue of the reforms now under way in Czechoslovakia is the new light they throw on the murder of Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk and the sinister role played by Russia's Anastas Mikoyan in the execution of Rudolf Slansky. On March 10, 1948, the body of 61-year-old

Masaryk, son of the creator of the Czechoslovak democratic republic, was found on the flagstones below the windows of his apartment in Prague's Czernin Palace. The official verdict was that he killed himself. Two weeks earlier the Communists staged an armed coup and seized power in Czechoslovakia with the aid of the Soviet army. They offered Masaryk the post of foreign minister in a new "coalition" government. Masaryk accepted the offer with great reluctance.

As he told this writer on several occasions, he was strongly opposed to the Communists. A man of great charm, he had a deep love of liberal democracy and the Western way of life. But Jan Masaryk, like his father, was also a Czechoslovak patriot. Aware that he might be risking his life, he had the illusion that by joining the Communists in the coalition government he would be in a position to salvage some of Czechoslovakia's

His death would have gone down in history as suicide were it not for the unprecedented anti-Russian changes that are taking place in Czechoslovakia. Silenced by fear for 20 years, men and women who know the facts have now come forward with the information that Masaryk was killed by an officer of the Russian secret service.

Even more damaging to Moscow was Mikoyan's role in the 1952 execution of Slansky who, though a fervent Communist leader, was hated by Stalin.

According to Karol Bacilek, former Czechoslovak minister of national security, it was Mikoyan who came to Prague with Stalin's order to kill Slansky. No wonder the Russians are furious. Mikovan is still a respected member of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist party. He was the president of the Supreme Russian Soviet until December, 1965, when he retired from active politics. But unlike ex-Premier Nikita Khrushchev who is now an "unperson" in the Soviet limbo, Mikoyan was retired with full ceremony and without a word of criticism from the Kremlin's present rulers. Czechoslovakia's former minister of national security is telling us, therefore, that Russia's party chief Brezhnev and Premier Kosygin were - and are — the colleagues of the man who played a key role in Slansky's execution. It is Mikoyan's misfortune that his "honorable" retirement should be belatedly blackened by Bacilek's revelations. He spent a lifetime betraying his friends, including Khrushchev. But he was the only official in the Kremlin who astonishingly survived all purges with his reputation untarnished. But murder will out. If Brezhnev and Kosygin want to preserve anything of their tattered prestige in Czechoslovakia, they would be well-advised to let Mikoyan clear himself publicly of Bacilek's

If there were other rigged executions in which Mikoyan was involved it would be wise for him to confess to them now, rather than to have them unearthed by anti-Russian rebels in the future.

Severe Heart Pains Due to Varying Causes

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q - What would cause sharp pains in the heart and difficulty breathing? A — The cause might be inflammation of the outer covering of the heart, angina pectoris, a coronary heart attack, gallbladder colic, indigestion with heartburn or effort syndrome (acute anxiety). Q — What is pericarditis with costochondritis? My son, who is in the Army, has this. Is it serious.

A — Pericarditis is an inflammation of the outer covering of the heart and costochondritis is an inflammation of the cartilage of the ribs. There is a wide variety of causes of pericarditis, some serious and some not. Costochondritis is painful but clears up spontaneously in a few weeks.

Q - I am taking quinidine for irregular heart beats. Can this drug be taken indefinitely? A — This valuable drug can be taken indefinitely only if you are under careful medical supervision.

Q - Is fibrillation of the heart curable? One doctor says it is and another says it isn't. A — This is another condition in which we prefer to speak of control rather than cure. Some victims can be controlled with digitalis and other with quinidine. More recently, the electric pacemaker has been gaining in favor. In some persons with persistent fibrillation, an electric timer can be sewn under the skin.

Q — Why do older persons suffer loss of memory and mental confusion? Is there any treatment for

A — The cause is hardening of the arteries in the brain. A great deal of work is being done on the treatment of this condition. The magnesium pemoline and the ribonucleic acid derivative mentioned in an earlier column are not yet commercially available, but three other drugs that are available have been used with some success. They are cyclandelate (Cyclospasmol), diphenlyhydantoin and procainamide and should be taken under a doctor's supervision. Q - Can bad breath be inherited? What can be done about it? A — Bad breath may be caused by decaying tissue, mucus or food particles in the mouth, nose, nasal sinuses or lungs. Heredity is not a factor. A cure depends on finding the cause and treating it. Good oral hygiene is an important part of the treatment and is often all that is needed.

Spits, Messerschmitts Fight Again in Air Epic

THE RAF WAS ALWAYS FRONT PAGE NEWS during the grim days of the Battle of Britain. Tremendously outnumbered, the Spitfire and Hurricane pilots shot the much-vaunted Luftwaffe to pieces in the only tactical battle ever fought in the air.

(EDITORS: Make matted lines conform.)

SEVILLE, Spain—(NEA)— Tablada, a short drive from the heart of this lovely, photogenic city, is a Spanish Air Force base, an Aero Club on weekends, and now it is a movie set. None of this bothers the flock of sheep grazing there.

It's not the place where one would expect to learn about and get caught up in the Battle of Britain.

The Battle of Britain began July 4, 1940 and lasted until late October. It was the only tactical battle ever fought in the air. It was an overwhelming victory for the outnumbered Royal Air Force and led to Winston Churchill's famous tribute, "Never in the field of human conflict has so much been owed to so many by so few.'

"The Battle of Britain" which is taking place today began in Spain in the second week of March 1968 and the result won't be known until September 1969. That's when, on the 29th anniversary of "Battle of Britain Day." the epic Harry Saltzman-United Artists film re-creation of an early World War II turning point is premiered in London.

Now, at Tablada, Messerschmitts, surprisingly color-ful with their blue bellies (camouflaging them from any plane flying below), spotted gray-green tops (camouflaging them from any plane flying above) and red noses, are lined up in impressive numbers. Gray Heinkel bombers, with a nose design that makes them appear to be laughing, are also lined up.

There is a lone British Spitfire, not yet wearing the familiar red, white, yellow and blue bull's eye emblem from its World War II days of

Two former enemies, now buddies, are excitably examining the planes and one of them, Gen. Adolf Galland, is about to fly a Messerschmitt. Galland, who had 80 missions and 30 hits over Britain as a lieutenant colonel in the Luftwaffe, is the film's technical adviser for the German side. He warms up the Messerschmitt engines, now made by Rolls-Royce, and his British counterpart, Air Commodore Robert Stanford-Tuck speaks excitedly. "You hear the sound of those engines. and you close your eyes and everything comes back."

Galland and Stanford-Tuck were each shot down during the war, captured and interrogated by an enemy team. Each was on the other's interrogation team.

As the Messerschmitt takes off, those who were in the war all look back nostalgically on something that time seems to have turned into a glorious game. Those who are too young or too American ever to have seen a plane overhead with a Swastika on the tail, are silent and frightened by the symbol of death

> Galland lands the Messerschmitt, after doing some loops for the cameras, and everyone heads for the Aero Club for a drink to old times.

"It's been 24 years since I flew a Messerschmitt," Galland says, "and it felt like yesterday.

"This picture is going to be something to beat the band,' Stanford-Tuck says. "Guy Hamilton, the producer and director, has gone to such great lengths for authenticity and detail. Did the battle have a feeling of sport to it? Oh, yes, the nerve and excitement were colossal.

Now, just as in wartime, there is a slack period. So the "troops" gather in the club to drink strong coffee and stronger stuff and tell

The talk gets around to the three Americans who flew for the RAF in The Battle of Britain and Stanford-Tuck recalls Billy Fisk, eventually killed in action. He came from a wealthy family. "One day he broke a Spitfire in landing," Stanford-Tuck says, "and he sat down and wrote out a check for the cost of a new one.

The story reminds Maurice Hynett, a lieutenant commander in the Royal Navy, on leave to fly a Spitfire for "The Battle of Britain" of a story he heard.

"There was the wealthy father of a young man who was so pleased his son got into the RAF he bought the boy a present. The lad showed up at his first squadron flying his very own Spitfire.'

Hynett had just flown the Spitfire for the first time.

"One minute you're on the ground and the next you're a Spitfire pilot. I fly jets and I didn't want to admit I didn't know how to start the fighter. So I asked the mechanic, 'Is

'Oh, yes. Don't forget your wobble pump, watch the fuel light, use the Ky Gas primer, move the engine cutoff forward, give it a turn on the starter, switch on and boost.' I did and the plane started. I thought 'Don't be a fool, admit you're not a Spitfire pilot.' Then I saw the camera plane in the air and I reacted to it and learned I was, after all, a Spitfire pilot."

Galland, in a corner surrounded by German journalists, is saying, "This film may be something like a national requirement for the British and her Allies. Since the film will be made, based on requirements of the Allied side, I feel it best for us, the Germans, as losers to co-operate and do the best we can so that the historical, fact-wise and tactical true story can be

It is a very wide canvas, and we must have humanity on it.

The humanity already signed to appear in the picture, which does not have one major role, includes Michael Caine, Rex Harrison, Laurence Olivier, Christopher Plummer, Robert Shaw. Flash Floods Spread Havoc In England

LONDON (AP) - Flash floods spread havoc through western and central England today. Troops, helicopters and army amphibious vehicles worked to rescue hundreds of people trapped by torrential rains.

More rain than normally falls in a month fell in a day, swelling rivers over their banks and sending up to six feet of water through low-lying towns. Officials said the storms were the worst in memory.

At least 39 major roads were closed. Trains to Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham were canceled. The West Country was virtually cut off from the rest of England.

Two deaths were reported. An 80-vear-old woman drowned in her bed in Devon and a man drowned in a suburb of Bristol. Two others were missing at Keynsham.

Baseball Leagues Will Operate Under Two Six-Team Divisions

time being, at least, major league baseball has set its house in order. How long the order remains is quite another question.

Meetings of the National and American leagues Wednesday led to the adoption of a two-divisional split of the NL's 12 teams in 1969 and agreement by the AL to increase its schedule from the previously agreed 156 games

That means both leagues will operate with two six-team divisions with a best-of-5 playoff between division champions determining the World Series oppomove into Montreal and San Diego next year, had voted to stay with a single 12-team league playing 162 games next year. All Star Football Game May Become a Casualty

Associated Press Sports Writer The possibility that the College All-Star Game in Chicago Aug. 2 may become an early casualty of the hassle between National Football League owners and players was a step nearer reality today

Vince Lombardi, general manager of Green Bay's champions, followed an order handed down by the owners earlier this week and politely ejected star quarterback Bart Starr and 10 other veterans from the Packers' training camp Wednesday.

Even if a settlement is reached in the dispute that threatens a suspension of NFL activity for the 1968 season—and there were no indications of this -it may not come in time to save the All-Star match.

Sawdust Works Well Filling Floor Cracks

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY-One good way Clara can remedy her floor cracks is to fill all the bad places with a wood crack filler. which she can buy at a building supply, paint or hardware store. Use the paste just as it comes out of the can according to the directions. When dry, smooth with a power sander.

DEAR POLLY-I am writing in regard to Clara's floor crack problem. Obtain some sawdust from the same type of wood and mix with glue to form a paste. (Polly's note-I was told that the milky white all-purpose glue we all use works well.) Fill cracks between the boards and any deep scratches with this paste and allow to dry. As a finish, cover the floor with two or three coats of varnish stain in finish color desired. (Polly's note-Sand before applying finish.)-JAC-

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY-The preparation my husband uses on his hair has left grease marks on the mahogany veneer bed headboard. Can someone tell me how to remove these as I have tried several things without success? -GERTRUDE

DEAR POLLY-My husband has some nylon shirts that are supposed to be permanent press but when I hung them on hangers to dry the fronts and back would cling together. When dry, there was a mass of wrinkles that had to be ironed after all. Finally I hit on the idea of folding a bath towel in half, lengthwise. First I laid it across the bottom of a hanger and then put a shirt over it. The shirts dry without the wrinkles. This also works on nylon or the new jerseylike uniforms with which I had the same difficulty.—SHARON

DEAR POLLY-Mrs. A. T. could have the mirror in her old organ top resilvered, install hooks and heavy wire for hanging and use it over a suitable table to have a decorative unit for her entrance hall, living room or dining room. I would prefer using the width as the length if the design works all right that way. Should there not be room for a table a shelf of matching color and finish could be used beneath the top.—EVELYN

British Open Second Round Opens Today

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, the two richest professionals in the golf world, set out today in the second round of the British Open Championship determined to win.

> Why? Said Palmer, of Latrobe, Pa.

"The gremlins seem to be against me, but when the day comes that I don't want to win, that's the day I quit.

Said Nicklaus, of Columbus, Ohio, "I am playing from tee to green better than ever in my life. But I cannot seem to get a putt up to the hole. Golf here is different and you have to cope with it.

Palmer, with a 77 and Nicklaus with a 76 in the first round over Carnoustie's 7,252-yard par 72 course, hardly appeared to be immediate major threats for the 1968 title.

Nor did Roberto de Vincenzo of Argentina, the defending champion. He, too, had a 77.

The leaders after the first of four 18-hole rounds were British amateur Michael Bonallack and English professional Brian Barnes, each at 70.

Sooners Are Voted Favorites

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) The forecasters, who were correcet only twice in the past eight years, may have placed the kiss of death on Oklahoma by voting the defending champion Sooners the 1968 title favorites in the 23rd Big Eight football poll.

Oklahoma was picked first on 116 ballots and second on 29. making OU an overwhelming choice. A record number of 157 ballots were cast by newsmen in the poll started by the late Don Pierce. Kansas sports publicist, and conducted again this year by his successor, Jay Si-

Nebraska edged Kansas 461 points to 485 for third place. both far behind Oklahoma's 222. Kansas had 14 first place votes, Nebraska 13.

Missouri edged Colorado for fourth place with 632 points against 675. although Colorado led Mizzou 8-6 in first place votes. Eleven voters saw Oklahoma State as high as third and OSU was sixth with 892 points

Kansas State was a strong choice to move out of last place. with 1,082 points against Iowa State's 1,203, as 112 saw Iowa State in last place. Colorado and Kansas were the only teams to draw votes for all eight positions.

The forecasters were never more wrong than last year. when Nebraska was picked to win but finished in a tie for fifth and sixth, Oklahoma was picked third but went 7-0, and lightly-regarded Kansas tied for second.

After 11 straight years of correctly picking Oklahoma, the forecasters chose OU in 1960 and the Sooners finished fifth. Then four straight years the team picked to win finished second-Kansas in 1961, Missouri in 1962 and Oklahoma in 1963-64. They were correct in picking Nebraska in 1965-66

Lots of Dough in Auto Goodies

By BOB COCHNAR NEA Automotive Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Only the punishment gluttons among us will be buying "stripped" cars these days. More often than not, the motorist's place in the pecking order can be determined by the number of "extras" on his

It's not even the base price of the car that's important. Why, there are many people who'll opt for a loaded-to-thegreenhouse Falcon rather than an under-equipped Cadillac. Driving an automobile had better be more than pleasurable; it should also be easy and, it would seem, expen-

Ford executive Burgess Scott once determined that the first auto extra was probably homemade. "It may have been a prong of wire attached to the dashboard to hold a cloth for cleaning the driver's goggles," he said. "Or it may have been a loop of rope to hold a blanket against the time motoring became chilly.

Before the advent of the closed car, accessory makers concentrated on items designed to make driving bearable-dusters, leather driving suits, goggles, face masks, portable celluloid windshields and the like, all very practi-

The closed car changed the direction and conspicuous consumption became somewhat more than an economic theory. The well-heeled motorist could purchase an automatic tire pump operating off the crankshaft, a 10-note electric horn, flowing metal monograms to personalize the car, an electric hand warmer for the steering wheel, an asbestos-lined metal oven for camping and, of course, a portable bed.

Today, extras are big, big business. Ford alone does an annual accessory business of close to a billion dollars.

Some 15 or 20 years ago, the vast majority of cars were purchased without factory-installed options mainly because the basic accessories where part of the purchase price-heater, carpeting, rear view mirrors, windshield wipers, cigarette lighter, etc. Today, all these items are standard as is automatic transmission (although you still pay extra for it). Despite this, more than 80 per cent of cars sold are ordered with extra-cost options.

The motorist's prediliction for gadgetry makes dealers and manufacturers happy people. The average optional thingamajig carries a 35 per cent markup; on more expensive cars, the markup can go as high as 50 or 60 per cent.

Nowadays, extras are lumped together in groups. There's a "comfort group" (wouldn't you think comfort should be built in at no added cost?) consisting of reclining seats, headrests, foam cushioning. And a "convenience group"-power assists in the form of steering, window raising and lowering, easier brake application, seat movement.

Don't forget the safety, performance and entertainment groups (this last one is the sleeper; available are stereo tape decks, AM-FM-stereo radios, multiple speakers, television and maybe, some day, go-go girls dancing between the bucket seats (another ex-

What do all these gadgets do to the performance of the automobile, as if anybody genuinely cares about performance? Ford's Scott says, for example, that if all available options are thrown onto and into a Thunderbird, more than 20 motors will be twisting, turning, lifting, lowering and adjusting for the convenience of the occupants.

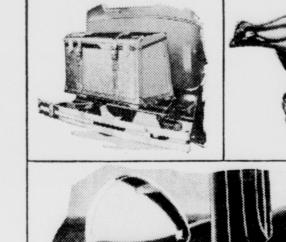

Inevitably, they take their toll. Even with a heavy-duty battery, there is a strain on the electrical system. And airconditioning (which more and more people feel is more a necessity than an option) does affect fuel economy.

Let no one think that accessory makers have shot their bolt. On the horizon are great and glorious items guaranteed to make the task of driving even simpler, if that can be conceived.

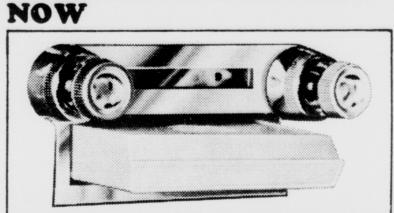

Scott sees an automatic position indicator, which is a road map automatically pinpointing the car's progress along a predetermined route. There could also be a thermoelectric oven-refrigerator which could store and cook frozen dinners. Or a periscopic rear vision mirror in which prisms reflect a picture of the view behind the car

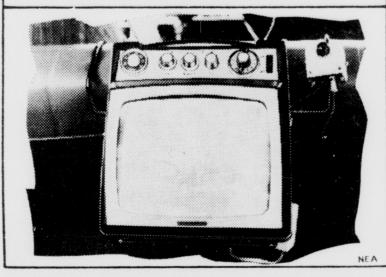

Perhaps, while all these automotive geniuses go about creating widgets and frammises to be gobbled up by breathless consumers, they might give passing thoughts to, say, designing a seat fit for a human being-even if we have to pay extra for it.

Meanwhile, slide your eightway power seat into position, push up your windows, set your thermostat at 70 degrees, adjust the bass and treble on your stereophonic tape deck,

THEN

OPTIONAL AT EXTRA COST accessories back in the 30s included such items as the luggage carrier, radiator cap with ornament and spotlight (left, right and center, above). Today's automobile options are more sophisticated, like the stereophonic tape system and car-home portable television set, below.

The Abolitionists

Remember, Americans, that we must and snall be free and enlightened as you are. Will you wait until we shall, under God, obtain our liberty by the crushing arm of power? Will it not be dreadful

-From "Walker's Appeal"

In 1829, David Walker of Boston, born a free Negro in North Carolina, issued a searing indictment of slavery and a ringing appeal for black revolution. A shiver shot through the nation. The South put a price on Walker's his feet. One Southern governor estimated that 100,000 slaves escaped in a span of 40 years before the Civil War. Thousands made their way to northern states and into Canada over the "Underground Railroad," whose "depots" were manned by courageous men and women of both races.

Harriet Tubman, an escapee herself, alone brought out 300 slaves in 19 daring trips into the South. Josiah Henson, the inspiration for Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," founded a colony for ex-slaves in Ontario. Another Negro woman, Sojourner Truth, was a powerful and hypnotic antislavery lec-

Most Northerners, while disliking slavery, were content to leave it alone, for a Union with slavery was better than a Union broken in war. The more they resisted abolition, the more strident the abolitionists became.

In 1831, abolition journalist William Lloyd Garrison proclaimed in the first issue of his "Liberator": "I will not equivocate—I will not excuse—I will not retreat a single inch—AND WILL BE HEARD." Two years later he organized the American Antislavery Society.

Ex-slaves began to be in great demand on the lecture circuit. Books recounting their experiences flooded from the presses to take their places on the South's forbidden list.

Famous names among the black abolitionist speakers and writers were Charles Lenox Remond, Samuel Ringgold Ward, Henry Highland Garnet, Martin R. Delaney. But towering over them all was the eloquent Frederick Douglass, an ex-slave who rose to become one of the greatest figures in Negro history.

"Those who profess to favor freedom and yet deprecate agitation," said Douglass in 1857, "are men who want crops without plowing up the ground, they want rain without

Reagan Denies Reports

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) Gov. Ronald Reagan of California plans to announce he will actively seek the Republican nomination for president, the Boston Herald Traveler said today in a copyright story. The report was met with a denial by a Reagan aide.

Lyn Nofziger, the governor's communications director, said, 'I'll tell you positively it isn't going to happen." He said the story is "completely without foundation.

The newspaper said Reagan would announce his candidacy in a nationwide television broadcast on July 21 and had reserved air time at a cost of $300,000

Nofziger said the broadcast time had been reserved but the program would be a film of a speech that Reagan had given in Indianapolis earlier. He did not give the subject of the Reagan, a favorite-son candidate, has previously said he will become a candidate for president the moment his name is placed in nomination at the Republican National Convention in August and not before.

The Herald Traveler story by James Mahoney said Reagan's announcement would be made the day he is heading toward Cincinnati for the National Governor's Conference.

The newspaper story said some politicians consider Reagan's entry into the presidential race "the last hope of stop the nomination of Richard M. Nix-

Some people take to water like ducks, but most beginners respond more like Anne Mavity, 5, Minneapolis. Anne just started Red Cross swimming lessons at Lake Nokomis and despite the reassurances of her instructor, Mrs. Marina Larson, Anne apparently wasn't sure that the whole thing was such a good idea. That water stuff gets in your eyes, your ears and your hair gets wet and what's more, it's cold, says Anne. (UPI)

LAGRANGE, N.C. (AP) -Federal agents poured out 2,622 gallons of moonshine whisky worth $40,000 if sold by the drink and made one arrest in a raid on a farmhouse east of La-

He Dreams Of Riches At Age 79

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—A. J. Stephens wondered why he didn't feel his 79 years, and then he read about a spring in Yugoslavia whose water is said to increase a man's potency.

The retired Kansas City investment man sent for some of the Yugoslav water and had it analyzed. Then he had an analysis made of some of the water he's been drinking from his own Basswood Springs near Kansas City for years.

The analysis showed, he says. that his water has twice the amounts of the same minerals contained in the Yugoslav Stephens' deduction: The United States has sexier water than Yugoslavia.

As a result, the water is being put on the market and Stephens has plans for a spa at his fishing resort where he says Bess Truman's bridge club used to meet once a year.

Stephens says he made a million with a rubber company before he was 30, and lost it in the 1929 crash. An acquaintance of Harry S. Truman, heJs dabbled in politics—unsuccessfully as far as being elected goesand was involved more successfully in business in Kansas City.

Among his property in the Kansas City area is Basswood Springs, a 100-acre preserve. Four of the 14 lakes are used by a private fishing club.

Stephens bought the resort in 1945. Until then, he says, he had arthritis, rheumatism and other illnesses. Once he started drinking the water from the springs, he says, his illness left.

Retired, he moved to Paradise Valley, near Phoenix, in 1962. Since then, he has had water shipped to him from his springs. Following his wife's death, Stephens married a divorcee some 35 years younger than he is.

News stories from Yugoslavia last April told how the reputed properties of water from a spring near Kladanji had started a boom there. There was no medical evidence of the water's attirbutes, but the "sex water" became big business.

Stephens says now that he's discovered that his water is twice as potent as Yugoslavia's, he's going to maket it -even though he doesn't need the

It already is being bottled at a dairy at Lawrence, Kan., (Allstate) and marketed on a limited scale. But Stephens and another retired Kansas City businessman living here, A. W. Hillmond, have bigger ideas.

Robbers Get Two Years In Prison

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Henry Floyd Brown and Andrew Evan Gipson were each sentenced to 20 years imprisonment Wednesday for the robbery last December of the Tower State

The sentence was handed down in U.S. District Court with the two defendants already serving long terms for January's robbery of the Metcalf State Bank in Overland Park and the slaying of a Kansas highway patrolman, Sgt. Eldon Miller.

Brown is serving 100 to 175 years for the robbery, and a life sentence for the murder. Gipson is serving 40 to 90 years for the robbery.

Judge George Templar, who imposed the most recent sentences, said they are in addition to the state sentences.

A third defendant in the Tower State Bank holdup-Richard Paz Vasquez-entered a plea of guilty in Los Angeles, where he lives. He was sentenced to 25 years. The loss in the holdup was

Television Script Men De-Emphasizing Violence

By CYNTHIA LOWRY AP Telvision-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Writers are tearing up pages of scripts. Editors are hunting bits of film dropped on the cutting room floor. Catsup and blank bullet sales to studio prop men are declining sharply.

The television industry is again—"de-emphasizing violence.

It has happened before and, to professional television-watchers, the action looks very much like one of TV's own re-runswith a difference.

During, and for a time after, the widely publicized Senate subcommittee hearings concluded in 1963 when the subjects of television sex and violence were explored, the round-house fights that seemed to climax every action show turned into one or two well-placed blows. There was a moratorium on lynchings and torture scenes. The number of cold-blooded killings in copsand-robbers shows dropped perceptively.

But slowly they all started creeping back into the so-called "formula shows." the series that must grind out from 26 to 32 differene episodes each season to be enacted by the same basic cast.

This time, however, it is not the same. Television, as well as its sister medium, motion pictures, is under criticism in the aftermath of the assassination of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and amid disturbances in cities and on campuses throughout the nation.

Television executives at both network and local levels are, as nounced or let it be known a group, veteran and skillful through their public relations channel pilots, whose professional survival depends on their judgment of the prevailing trayal of violence. weather, the moods and whim

The television code of the National Association of Broadcasters, to which most networks and stations subscribe, contains numerous sections designed to control depictions of violence, in sections devoted to "general program standards" and "responsibility toward children.'

Each network's censorship department, whatever its official title, has well established rules of thumb and all ban the use of "violence for the sake of violence," while opening a small door by mentioning the needs of 'advancing the plot.'

CBS and NBC had begun a crackdown on make-believe brutality and gun-play after the death of Dr. King. But as events and criticism began to snowball controls were tightened. Where NBC's old guidelines had permitted displays of violence "where justified," they were rewritten to read "where essen-

He said that ABC, which has specialized in shoot 'em up shows, is scrutinizing its cops and robbers programs-it will have four of them next season.

'We're reworking scripts and moving them more into the area of characterization," he said.

CBS and NBC have indicated, too, that "teasers" "trailers" and "promos"—the action-filled bits shown at the beginning of programs, the coming-nextweek sample at the end of shows and the show advertisements in commercial time-will receive attention from the violence doctors.

Negro Re-Enlistments In Army Are Decreasing WASHINGTON (AP) - Negro registered first term re-enlist-dropped dramatically, according to a Pentagon report cover-

The development, which officials says is puzzling, has triggered a study to find out why.

Officials are reluctant to link racial unrest with the slide of Negro first term re-enlistment rates from 66.5 per cent in 1966 to only 31.7 per cent last year.

One senior official said. "nobody knows why" Negro soldiers showed such an abrupt change of attitude toward signing up for another hitch after completing a first enlistment or a draft tour

"I'm just as puzzled as you are," the official told a reporter. He said his experts are analyzing the situation.

The Army said, "It must be noted there is a corresponding drop in re-enlistment rates for Caucasians as well.

To Ask Federal Aid for State Highway Work

TOPEKA (AP)-Gov. Robert Docking of Kansas and Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri agreed in a telephone conference Tuesday to seek federal aid in building a freeway linking Kansas with the Kansas City, Mo., International Airport.

Celebrated 100th Birthday July 4

By MARY ALICE CAMPBELL Neosho Daily News

For The Associated Press SENECA, Mo. (AP) - Now hat the celebration is over, this ittle town of about 1,500 populaion can settle down to wait for ts 100th birthday in October.

An estimated 15,000 celebrators crowded into this Missouri-Oklahoma border community ast week. This town is noted for ts Fourth of July celebrations and there has been a big "toto" here annually since 1870. This year's celebration was special since townspeople had decided to celebrate their centennial in advance.

It was on Oct. 31, 1868, that the town of Seneca was actualy platted. J. C. Bunch laid out the lines and the settlement was called Seneca because the Seneca Nation of Indians was immediately across the line in Oklahoma Territory.

Jim Sherer represented the law in the early years, serving for a number of years as city marshal and also as U.S. marshal. Years later Sherer recorded his memories of the early

"In 1867," he wrote, "the Bunch brothers moved into our country from Polk County. They had a sawmill. At the same time a man named Nelson moved in near the mill and opened a store. This was the beginning of Seneca. About a year later another store was started by Layton and Allen and for a long time just a small settlement clustered around the mill. It was not until the railroad came that the town began to boom, though.'

Sherer was referring to the Frisco railroad built through Seneca in 1878. The road went as far as the territorial line and the town became the western terminus of the railroad since no further right of way could be obtained.

In 1869 the town listed Gregg and Co.'s Foundry and Machine Shops, general merchants by the names of R. M. Jones, Allen and Layton, Nelson and Sherer and A. Barton; grocers and bakers J. A. Dall and Gus Heck: and druggists by the names of Ball and Hutchinson. Descendants of those pioneer families still live in the area.

Livery stables, a silversmith, two blacksmith and wagon shops, boot and shoe shops, a gunsmith, a grist mill and a saw mill were among other activities soon in operation.

The town boasted it was "built on Lost Creek, it possesses good drainage, while the hills on the north and south are reservoirs of purest water.

"These "reservoirs of water" spelled disaster for the little town in 1896. On' May 30 that year, a cloudburst swelled usually placid Lost Creek and much of the town was destroyed. Eighteen people lost their lives in the Earlier, in 1882, a fire had threatened the town. The loss that time was estimated at about $16,000 including what is recorded as "Press Browning's Saloon stock.

Transplant Mortality Rate Alarms English Physicians

By TOM A. CULLEN European Staff Correspondent

LONDON - (NEA) - A halt should be called to all heart transplant operations until more is known concerning the risks they entail, in the opinion of many doctors here.

British doctors are alarmed by the high mortality rate among heart transplant patients (16 out of 21 to date) since the first operation was performed in December 1967. Of the five patients still alive, Philip Blaiberg, 58-year-old South African dentist, is the longest survivor, he having received his new heart on January 2, 1968.

The reaction against spare parts surgery here follows the death of Frederick West, Britain's first heart transplant case, who survived the operation by 46 days. West died of lung and kidney infections.

Critics argue that not enough is known concerning the body's rejection of such heart transplants to warrant going ahead with "this procession of deaths." as The Times's medical correspondent calls it.

This pessimism is not shared, however, by all doctors. For example, at The National Heart Hospital, where the West operation was performed, the surgical team responsible for it has announced its determination to go ahead with other heart transplants as the opportunity

Meanwhile, the first steps have been taken to set up a National Tissue Service, where eventually it is hoped to match the tissues of people awaiting organ transplants with those of possible donors.

Britain needs at least three or four successful transplants in order to evaluate its medical techniques in this field, according to Dr. James Mowbray, the immunologist who worked on the West case.

"When we have a few groups of Blaibergs, we can stop for awhile and have discussions with other teams about the best treatment that has emerged," says Dr. Mowbray

"There is no point in stopping now and trying to exchange insufficient information," he adds.

While Britain's heart transplant team pleads for time, its critics are clamoring for an end to all such spare parts experimentation until more research is done in the laboratory. If the medical profession is not prepared to act, then Parliament should step in, according to the medical correspondent of The Times.

"There can be no justification for an operation that carries such a devastatingly high mortality rate, and the performance of which is more or less equivalent to a death sentence," this expert claims.

Even the British Medical Journal appears unexpectedly cool towards heart transplant operations. "With the techniques available at present a complete restoration to normal life cannot be expected." this organ of the British medical profession points out.

Dr. Abraham Marcus, a noted medical authority, agrees that heart transplantation is palliative surgery at best. "It can promise the patient no more than a very short extension of life in a carefully controlled environment," says Dr. Marcus.

The major risk involved in such operations is that the body will reject the heart as 'alien" tissue, the soldier cells or antibodies destroying any foreign invaders whether they be germs or organs.

To counteract this rejection, heart transplant patients are heavily dosed with cortisonetype drugs known as "im-muno-suppressives." These drugs, in turn, constitute the second major risk, for they reduce the body's resistance to infection. Thus infection of the lung and kidneys were the cause of Frederick West's death, his new heart, meanwhile, functioning normally until the very end.

The absence of knowledge concerning the body's rejection of graft organs is the main reason why British doctors are opposed to further operations at this stage.

Meanwhile, the setting up of a National Tissue Service is widely welcomed in medical circles. It follows on the heels of "Eurotransplant," a tissue registration service set up in Leiden, Holland. Although only a few weeks old, 'Eurotransplant' already has 250 potential organ recipients registered, the use of a computer and the co-operation of about twenty hospitals.

Frederick West His death raised doubts.

Eventually it is hoped that a system will be devised whereby people can assign their tissues while they are, alive, the tissues being typed and the potential donors being issued with cards giving the pertinent data.

Anti-Power Activity Is Gaining Momentum

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) - An inherent distrust of power pockets is part of the American tradition, old as the Mayflower, basic as the Constitution. Seldom is the fear of monopoly power far from the consciousness of Americans.

From time to time the country does go through periods in which it watches but takes no action against financial or business abuses. But then, as every schoolboy knows, comes the dramatic crackdown of the trustbusters.

In recent weeks businessmen have reason to believe that some people are getting a bit worked up about corporate and financial practices. Antipower activity seems to be building.

During the past month the Justice Department strongly suggested to some of the country's most prominent, wealthy and influential businessmen that they drop their seats on the boards of certain large compa-

This suggestion, backed by the threat of legal action, involves an old and familiar practice, that of interlocking directorates. The Justice Department felt, for example, that a man who sat on the board of Goodrich should not sit also on the board of Ford, which makes some competing products.

The stock market is really being scrutinized, especially in regard to the influence of brokers on the total costs of buying and selling securities. The Securities and Exchange Commission, watchdog of the market, also is preparing to investigate the concentration of buying and selling power. The Federal Trade Commission, which has responsibility for preventing mergers that might lessen competition or create monopolies, has now begun a major investigation of conglomerate corporations. The conglomerate is a development largely of the 1960s, in which perhaps a dozen diverse companies are merged into one operation. Does this merging create efficiency? Or monopoly?

The outcome of this study could have far-reaching consequences, for some of today's most successful companies are amalgamations created in the past two decades out of disparate enterprises and mortared with financial wizardry. The conglomerate trend is one of the most powerful forces in business today.

A House Banking subcommittee has released a study stating that commercial banks are acquiring a dangerous "snowballing economic power" over a large section of U.S.

industry, mostly through use of some $607 billion in assets.

The report mentioned airlines and metals as industries in which banks have such strong financial interests that might not be in the best interests of the nation.

Another development of the 1960s, more recent even than the rise of conglomerates, is bound to attract more attention from congressional and regulatory officials. This is the merger of large insurers and mutual funds into billion-dollar operations.

No Rapid Movement Foreseen

By JACK MILLER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing experts anticipate only gradual movement of Negroes into white neighborhoods as a result of a recent Supreme Court decision and passage of the federal open housing law.

"Our best guess is that there's going to be no huge, massive influx" of Negroes into white areas, said an authoritative source at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The source said the main reason is that most Negroes simply can't afford to move into most white areas.

Eugene P. Conser, executive vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, agreed and added that moving is costly and "it takes time for people to find a different location. It's a great inconvenience for people to move."

The open housing provisions contained in the 1968 Civil Rights Act, passed in May, rule out discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin. It goes into effect in three stages and will cover 80 per cent of the nation's housing by 1970.

The Supreme Court decision, issued June 17, holds that an 1866 civil rights law prohibits all racial discrimination in sale or rental of housing.

It goes beyond the new law, whose one major exemption would have permitted discrimination by an owner of his own home who sells or rents it without the aid of a broker.

Housing Secretary Robert C. Weaver said the administration's new housing bill, pending in Congress, will add considerably to the supply of integrated housing within reach of Negroes in low and moderate income levels. He said some of the new housing units will be dispersed in white or predominately white neighborhoods.

But Weaver also said in an interview that one of the factors which might work against large-scale movement of Negroes to white areas is growing black nationalism whose advocates believe Negroes should live among themselves.

Officials said further that many Negroes will want to remain among Negroes; that many will want to stay in their present neighborhoods—even slums—because they have roots there

The officials agreed that middle-class Negroes are the ones most likely to move.

Asked whether there is expected to be much defiance of the new mandates, a government source said: "There's going to be a few hotheads who will try to resist, but they will be dealt with firmly and fairly."

Would Cancel Reservoir Entrance Fee

WASHINGTON (AP) — An amendment to the Omnibus Public Works Bill adopted Tuesday by a House subcommittee would cancel the practice by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers of collecting entrance fees at federal reservoirs after March 31, 1970.

The announcement came from the office of Rep. Durward Hall, R-Mo., who along with Rep. Ed Edmondson, D-Okla., and 23 other sponsors submitted a similar amendment last year.

The action by the House public works subcommittee is likely to be endorsed by the full committee Wednesday, Hall said, and could come up for final action on the House floor within the next two weeks.

Petitions were submitted for the removal of the admission fees as early as 1966 when they were imposed by a Johnson administration executive order. Among them were the signatures of about 28,000 Southwest Missouri residents.

The amendment provides that "no entrance or admission fees shall be collected by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers after March 31, 1970."

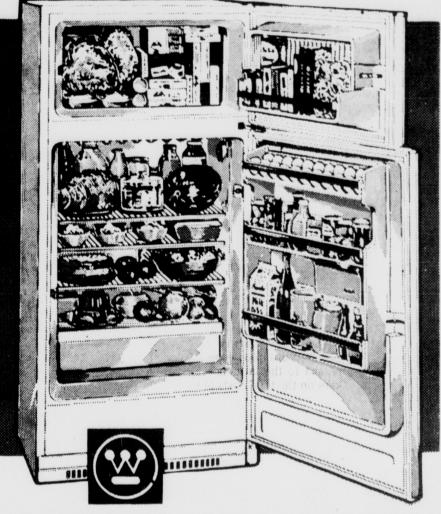

It also includes instructions regarding user fees:

"User fees shall be collected by employes of highly developed facilities requiring continuous presence of personnel for maintenance, and shall not be collected in areas lightly developed, such as scenic sites, or boat-launching piers where no hydraulic or mechanical equipment is provided."

Serve toasted walnuts with raisins and dates for a delightful cool weather dessert. To toast walnut halves, scatter them over a small cookie sheet and bake in a moderate oven until lightly browned. Watch the toasting to make sure the nuts do not over-brown and shake the pan a few times during the baking period.
